

CHOICE

You have none.

The candidates of the upcoming election would all like to have you believe that your vote is important.

Unfortunately, the more people they do convince of this, the less significant your vote becomes. As more people vote, (remember those campaigns?) your vote merely ends up as a token in a continent-wide popularity contest, and a mob driven more by emotion than reasoning is what will really be responsible for choosing your leader.

Regardless of that, these leaders have spent more time throwing mud than addressing real concerns. They make nods and gestures toward problems in the hopes that average citizens will hear the words and ingrain them in their mind as an association with that particular politician.

You are told that you are choosing your Canada, when in fact, the leader you chose does not matter. These leaders do not have the power to create any real changes to the way things are running now, they can only give more money to some people, and less to others.

Democracy cannot succeed in uniting Canada. We are a large nation, spanning North America, and our local cultures vary greatly. What will “uniting” us produce but more money and more cities slowly becoming cultural voids? Alternatives must be explored before we self-destruct.

anus.com

CHOICE

You have none.

The candidates of the upcoming election would all like to have you believe that your vote is important.

Unfortunately, the more people they do convince of this, the less significant your vote becomes. As more people vote, (remember those campaigns?) your vote merely ends up as a token in a continent-wide popularity contest, and a mob driven more by emotion than reasoning is what will really be responsible for choosing your leader.

Regardless of that, these leaders have spent more time throwing mud than addressing real concerns. They make nods and gestures toward problems in the hopes that average citizens will hear the words and ingrain them in their mind as an association with that particular politician.

You are told that you are choosing your Canada, when in fact, the leader you chose does not matter. These leaders do not have the power to create any real changes to the way things are running now, they can only give more money to some people, and less to others.

Democracy cannot succeed in uniting Canada. We are a large nation, spanning North America, and our local cultures vary greatly. What will “uniting” us produce but more money and more cities slowly becoming cultural voids? Alternatives must be explored before we self-destruct.

anus.com

